ORANGE/ NATURAL

Wait, what the heck is 'orange' wine? First of all, nope, it's not made from oranges.

Although the colour is often orange, yet it can vary from yellow to pink. Using similar methods to making red wine, by leaving the white grape skins, seeds and sometimes whole stems to ferment with the pressed juice, this method of macerating the wines creates a colour, complexity and texture, which quite different to a white wine. The longer the skin contact, the darker the colour, the more tannins, texture and unique varietal aromatics. All our natural wines are organic and produced in small batches with minimal intervention from the wine maker. By not adding or removing anything at the cellar, the end product is unfiltered and naturally low in sulphates.
